COUNTY PAYS FOR LAW LIBRARY

Committee Astonished at Size of the Various Bills Handed In

$340 FOR SPECIAL ATT'Y

The Board of Supervisors by a vote of fourteen to ten Wednesday morning voted to maintain the law library at the court house used by the judges and the lawyers of Lake county. Chairman Mather explained that the cost of bringing down the library to date would be $620 and intimated that would be about the cost per year hereafter. Dilger and Clarke were very outspoken against the board taking on this expense, each declaring that the Bar Association had broken faith with the board in not maintaining the library as they promised to do at the time the library was installed.

Mr. Crapo took the stand that the board might be called upon to furnish tools for carpenters, paint for painters, etc., if they continued the plan of buying the law books for the lawers to use in court action. Mr. Clarke's particular peeve was that the Bar Association had broken faith and is not doing what it agreed to do in keeping the library up. However the matter came to a vote and stood as follows.

Aye: Bairstow, Eger, Holderidge Hollstein, Hutton, Kirschner, Maether, Meyer, Monahan, Murphy, O'Conner, Rindghal, Vercoe, Webb of Waukegan.

Nay: Barnstable, Clarke, Crapo, Dilger, Martin, McCullough, Paddock, Stratton, Thompson, Webb of Antioch.

Mr. Clarke after the vote said that he felt the library should be kept up but it also was very mean that the men, meaning the lawyers, who hold themselves up as men and gentlemen should have gone back on their word in promising to keep up the library when they said if the board would establish it they would buy the additional books necessary. This he insisted, they had not done and had made no moye to do.

The presentation of bills totaling $305 from Attorney Theo Forby of Zion City in the connection with the beer running cases between August 15 and August 29, caused a sensation on the committee having the matter in hand.

Mr. Forby has charged the supervisors twenty-five dollars a day for his services as a lawyer Then besides he charged up lunches, carfare and the use of his auto in catching the beer runners etc. Furthermore there are specific instances where he has charged the twenty-five dollars a day for holding conferences with State's Attorney Welch, Atterney A. V. Smith and Attorney Middlekauf of the Attorney General's office.

Another sensation came to the committee when they looked at the detective bills put in by the central detective agency in Chicago. That showed ten dollars a day for operating on June 7, 8, and 9. And besides their expenses which included rail road fare, buying booze, playing slot machines, buying cigars, hotel bills etc., $87.65. Total $147.65. Then on another bill covering similar items the total was $265.67 the two bills amounting to $415.32.

Then the committee had a further drop when they saw a bill from Sidney H. Block special attorney, which called for $340 in total. Seperating the items of expense it was found that a hundred dollars covered the inspection of certain stores in Lake County, Kenosha and Racine.

Another item was $240 for work in the police court in Waukegan and also the juvenile court in the court house. The items at the court covered many cases which apparently Mr. Block had handled for the State's Attorney's office.

An Indispensable.

Some years ago, in a certain flagship, the commander had occasion to find fault with the admiral's cook, and awarded him three days of the punishment, known at that period as Ten A. The admiral heard of the affair, and sent for the commander on the quarterdeck. "What do you mean by it?" stormed the incensed admiral. "Please to understand that I can get a hundred commanders like you, but only one cook like him!"

Resolutions Adopted by Soldiers and Sailors

On Friday of last week there was a meeting of returned Soldiers and Sailors who held themselves subject to call by the Chairman of the Salvation Army campaign fund. Many complimentary remarks were made regarding the work of the Salvation Army, even at the front.

Committees were appointed for the collection of contributions to the fund. All present unanimously endorsed the campaign by the following resolution:

Whereas the Salvation Army has ever been a factor for the uplift of humanity, and

Whereas, during the World war the Salvation Army by its devotion to our Soldiers and efficient service has been of direct benefit and a friend in need, and

Whereas, this institution is now seeking financial aid for the purpose of the continuation of its good work.

Therefore, be it resolved, That we, the undersigned returned soldiers from the battlefields and cantonments in meeting assembled, hereby voice our appreciation for the relief extended to us by this splendid organization and

Be, it further resolved, that we give our endorsement and support in this campaign for funds and hearily recommend this call for the kind consideration of the people, for liberal contributions and over subscription of this fund.

Mrs. Geo. Renehan Dies at McAllister Hospital

Mrs. Kate Renehan, wife of George Renehan of Round Lake died at the Jane McAllister hospital in Waukegan on Tuesday after an illness of several months. In July of the present year she submitted to a serious operation and never fully recovered from the effects. Mrs. Renehan was fifty years of age and few women had a wider acquaintance throughout the county than she.

The funeral was held from her late home this (Thursday) morning. Services were also held at St. Catherine's church at McHenry at eleven o'clock. Interment in McHenry cemetery.

Fatally Hurt When Scaffold Falls at Fox Lake Bridge

Julius Keg, Blue Island, who has the contract for building a new bridge across the Fox river at Fox Lake, suffered perhaps fatal injuries late Wednesday afternoon when he fell thirty feet. He was on a scaffold superintening the pouring of concrete into the last form when the scaffold collapsed and he plunged to the ground. He suffered a broken leg and internal injuries.

He was removed to the Willis Inn and later to the Waukegan hospital. An inspector on the job also was injured in the fall but not as seriously as Keg.

Loyalty Well Rewarded.

A Parisian with a sense of humor bequeathed 300 francs to each relative who abstained from attending his funeral. One poor relative insisted on following the deceased to the grave: and her loyalty was rewarded, for by a codicil to his will the deceased left the residue of his large fortune to those relatives who were prepared to sacrifice the 300 francs.

The "White Feather."

The expression, "He showed the white feather," has its origin in reference to game cocks. Pure-bred game cocks have only red and black feathers, but crossbreeds have a white feather in the tail. The slightest impurity in strain is said to destroy the bird's pluck, hence the white feather is used to denote cowardice.

Wheat Berry Perfected.

Many of the present superior wheats produced in the United States were introduced into this country from Asia, Europe and South America, and acclimated to our country while undergoing the test. They have been bred and crossed until a berry has been secured which will adapt itself to the region requiring a wheat crop.

SUPERVISORS APPROVE ROAD BOND

One Million Issue Advised in Place of $700,000 to Voters at Fall Election

FEDERAL ROADS' DELAYED

The board of supervisors Tuesday went on record as favoring a million dollar road building program over one of $700,000, and that the aid they can get from the state unil a later date will not deter them from getting the work started in the county at the earliest moment. There were several reasons for this action. One was that unless the road and bridge committee gets to work at once and maps out the various roads that are to be improved and presents the matter to the board with least possible delay, the road bond issue could not be submitted to the voters at November election, and therefore would have to go over for two years unless a special election were called.

Another reason was that the state is away behind its schedule in the $60,000,000 road program. Only about 250 miles of roads had been completed, although the plan had been to construct from 800 to 1,000 miles of highway in the state this year. Naturally the roads that were contemplated this year will have precendence over later plans, and therefore the state would not get busy on the Lake county work until 1921, at least so far as giving state aid. For that reason the supervisors decided to go ahead with the county program and let the state come in later as it sees fit, the board being assured that this would be done. This was done on Belvidere road and the committee was told that the refund promised on this work is good because the state would see it through.

The holding up of the state road building program is caused by shortage of materials, and also a serious shortage of contractors.

The following roads will be improved according to the revised program which will be financed with the $1,000,000 bond issue.

Rockland road from Talegraph road to Libertyville, thence to Ivanhoe.

Deerfeld road from Highland Park to Telegraph road.

Highwood to Telegraph road.

Extension of Rand road from Wauconda to Volo, connection with county bond issue road to Belvidere road.

Leaving Belvidere road at Hainesville through Round Lake to center of Section 19.

Commencing with west end of concrete on Grand avenue, west to Hawkins' slough and north from Lake Villa through Antioch to state line.

One-half mile of Sheridan road at each end in Zion City.

Belvidere road, north road that leads to Wadsworth.

Rand road from Volo, leading to Fox Lake bridge now being built to connect with Lake Geneva.

Mrs. William Johns Passes Away Friday Last

On Friday of last week at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Bartlett, in this village occurred the death of Mrs. William Johns, at the age of seventy-nine years and seven months. For some time she had been in failing health and her death was not unexpected.

Mary Ann Clayton was born at Saxby, Lincolnshire, England, Feb. 18, 1840, and grew to young womanhood in that locality. In 1863 she was united in marriage to William Johns of Swansen, Wales. For a time they made their home in London, then coming to America directly after the Chicago fire they located in that city where Mr. Johns followed his trade, that of a carpenter. To them ten children were born only two of whom, William J. Johns of Chicago and Mrs. George Bartlett of Antioch are left to mourn her loss. For the past seven years she has made her home with her daughter in this village and has made many friends during that time.

The funeral services were held at the Bartlett home Saturday morning, with Rev. S. E. Pollock in charge. The remains were taken to Chicago on the eleven o'clock train, for burial in Rose Hill cemetery, beside her husband who died in 1901.

Lazzaroni Assailants Sentensed to Life Imprisonment

Two negro rioters, the first to be convicted in the criminal courts, were sentenced to life imprisonment by Judge Joseph Sabath last week for the killing of Morris Lazzeroni, of Chicago, who was stabbed to death in that city during the recent race trouble there.

The jury arrived at a verdict of manslaughter after an hour's deliberation. The men sentenced were Walter Colvin, 16 years old, 3908 Dearborn street, and Charles Johnson, 18 years old, 53 West 36th street.

The convicted boys climbed on Lazzaronia's wagon late in the afternoon of July 28, as he was driving south on State street near 36th. When the police arrived, Lazzeroni was found to have been stabbed twenty-eight times.

On the plea of the defendants attorneys Judge Sabath said he would hear a motion for a new trial Monday. This was consented to by Assistant State's Attorney James C. O'Brien.

This case will be watched with interest by the people of Antioch on account of Mr. Lazzaroni being the father of Mrs. John Pacini of this village.

Incompleteness.

How universal is the sense of incompleteness in human experience! Youth, maturity and even old age are ever reaching for the something else which they crave for the hour, which seems to be the essential need of the year while we occasionally meet natures who are bending every force of their working years to the end of attaining some great ambition, falling in which, life to them is but a fraction.—Robert Carroll.

Baptized in a Balloon.

The child of a well-known member of the British parliament was recently christened in the crypt of the house of commons. This is, in a sense, a survival of the custom of bygone days, when christenings in crypts were by no means uncommon. In one recent case in California, for instance, the ceremony was performed in a diving bell at the bottom of the sea. In another case the proud parents of the new arrival persuaded a clergyman to baptize the child while up in a balloon.

Canning Factory Has Strike at Grayslake

Grayslake is not far behind the rest of the world when it comes to being up-to-date in the matter of strikes.

Last Thursday morning the teamsters of the Inderrieden Canning company put their heads together and waited for Farm Superintendent Seisser and asked that they be granted a raise from thirty-five to forty-five cents per hour. Now it is important that the teamsters and all others connected with that institution be kept at work. The superintendent went iuto immediate conference with the men, which resulted in an agreement to make the raise provided that each team draw three loads per day. But if only two loads were made the pay should remain at the old rate.

The following morning, a number of men in the factory decided they were also entitled to more pay. They did not go to work, but waited for Superintendent Pitton to show up, the force met him and mode their grievances known. They also wanted an increase of ten cents an hour. Mr. Pitton promptly told them to get their pay, that new men would be brought to take their places. However, an alternative was given them to oonsider, it being a raise of five cents per hour. A vote was taken on the proposition. Five men voted to accept the raise, while the balance refused it. The five went back to work and the others drew their pay and went back to the city. The same day more men were sent there to take the places of the strikers and all proceeded very satisfactory.

Balancing Trade.

Where one country exports extensively to another and buys nothing from it the checks and drafts given in payment do not balance and it becomes necessary to ship gold or otherwise readjust accounts. This is expensive and makes it necessary to pay a premium in exchange. This premium is virtually an addition to prices paid. When it becomes too high purchases will be made in other markets. Thus will trade be lost unless it is balanced.

CHAPTER XVIII—Continued.

"You take this one," said Barnes, "and I will manage the other." He was in a hurry to get away from the house. There was no telling when the government agents would descend upon the place.

Barnes helped Peter to lift the trunks into the car and then ordered him to start at once for Hart's Tavern.

"You can return later on for your things," he said.

"I got 'em tied up in a bundle in the garage, Mr. Burns," he said. "Won't take a second to get 'em out." He hurried around the corner of the house.

A dry, quiet chuckle fell upon Barnes' ears. He glanced about in surprise and alarm. No one was in sight.

"Look up, young man," and the startled young man obeyed. His gaze halted at a window on the second story, almost directly over his head.

Mr. Sprouse was looking down upon him, his sharp features fixed in a sardonic grin.

"Well, I'll be d—!" burst from Barnes' lips.

"Surprised to see me, eh? If you're not in a hurry, I'd certainly appreciate a lift as far as the Tavern, old man. I'll be down in a jiffy. Stand aside! I'm going to drop." A moment later he swung over the sill, and dropped lightly to the ground eight feet below.

"See, here, Sprouse or whatever your name is—"

"Better hear me out," broke in Sprouse calmly. "I could drill a hole through you so quickly you'd never know what did it," he went on. His hand was in his coat pocket, and a quick glance revealed to Barnes a singularly impressive angle in the cloth, the point of which seemed to be directed squarely at his chest. "But I'm not going to do it. I just want to set myself straight with you. In a word, I never got anywhere near the room in which the jewels were hidden. This is God's truth, Barnes. I wasn't the only one who was trying to get the baubles, my friend. It was a game in which only the best man could win."

"I know the truth now about Roon and Paul," said Barnes significantly.

"You do?" sneered Sprouse. "I'll bet you a thousand to one you do not. The girl was led to believe that they were a couple of crooks and that they fixed me in that tavern down there. Isn't that what she told you? Well, that story was cooked up for her special benefit. Roon was the Baron Hedlund. Hedlund came up here a week or so ago to keep a lookout for his wife. The baroness is supposed to be deeply enamored of Prince Ugo. He found letters which seemed to indicate that she was planning to join the prince up here. When he heard of the arrival of a lady at Green Fancy the other afternoon, he got busy. I admit that I am the gentleman who telephoned the warning up to the prince. They tried to head the baron and his man off at the cross-roads, but he beat them to it. If there was to be a fight, they didn't want it to happen anywhere near the house. I believe Ugo is the one who got the baron—or Roon, as you know him. Now, that is the true story of the little affair.

"See Here, Sprouse, or Whatever Your Name Is—"

"To go back to my own troubles. When I got out into the hall night before last, after leaving her room, I heard voices whispering in Prince Ugo's room. I beat it up the stairway into the attic. Nothing happened, so I sneaked down to have a peep around. The door to Ugo's room was open, but there was no light on the inside. He came to the door and looked up and down the hall. Then some one else came out and started to sneak away. I leave you to guess the sex,

"Nicholas butted in at this unfortunate juncture. He made the mistake of his life. Ugo jumped back into his room. In less than a second he was out again. He landed squarely on Nicholas' back as the fellow turned to escape. I saw the steel flash. Poor old Nick went down in a heap, letting out a horrible yell. Ugo dragged him into the room and dashed back into his own. A moment later he came out again, yelling for help. There was only one thing left for me to do and that was to get out on the roof if possible, and wait for things to quiet down. I got out through a trap door and stayed there for an hour or so.

"Well, to shorten the story, I finally took a chance and slid down to the eaves where I managed to find the limb of a tree big enough to support me—just as if the Lord had ordered it put there for my special benefit. I was soon on the ground, and that meant safety for me. I had heard Ugo tell the others that Nicholas said the man who stabbed him was yours truly. Can you beat it?

"And now comes the maddening part of the whole business. He said that the crown jewels were gone! The thief was running downstairs when he staggered to the door. If we are to find the crown jewels, my friend, we will first have to find Prince Ugo. He has them."

"I don't believe a word of this yarn," said Barnes flatly. "You have the jewels and—"

"Look here, Mr. Barnes, I'm not going to double-cross you again. That's all over. I want to get that scurvy dog who knifed poor old Nick. If you can give me a lead, I'll try to run Prince Ugo down. And if I do, we'll get the jewels."

"We? You amuse me, Sprouse."

"Well, I can't do any more than give my promise, my solemn oath, or something like that. I can't give a bond, you know. I swear to you that if I lay hands on that stuff, I will deliver it to you. Might just as well trust me as Ugo."

"Get in the car," said Barnes suddenly. He had decided to take a chance with the resourceful, indefatigable rascal. There was something convincing about Sprouse's version of the affair at Green Fancy.

Barnes told him that he knew of Prince Ugo's flight. Sprouse looked thoughtful for a long time.

"So O'Dowd knows that I really was after the swag, eh? He believes I got it?"

"I suppose so."

"The only one who thinks I'm absolutely innocent is Ugo, of course—and Mrs. Van Dyke. That's good." Sprouse smacked his lips. "I've got a pretty fair idea where I can find Mr. Loeb. It will take a little time—a couple of days, perhaps—but sooner or later he'll turn up in close proximity to the beautiful baroness."

CHAPTER XIX.

A Trip by Night and a Late Arrival.

Shortly after sundown that evening, the Rushcroft company evacuated Hart's Tavern. They were delayed by the irritating and, to Mr. Rushcroft, unpardonable behavior of two officious gentlemen, lately arrived, who insisted politely but firmly on prying into the past, present and future history of the several members of the organization, including the new "backer."

Barnes had devised a very clever plan for getting Miss Cameron away from the tavern without attracting undue attention. She was to leave in one of the automobiles that he had engaged to convey the players to Crowndale, where they were to "show." In case of detention or inquiry, she was to pose as a stage-struck young woman who had obtained a place with the company at the last moment through his influence.

When the hour came for the departure from Hart's Tavern he deliberately engaged the two secret service men in conversation in the taproom. Miss Cameron left the house by the rear door and was safely ensconced in Peter's automobile long before he shook hands with the "rat-catchers" and dashed out to join her. Tommy Gray's car, occupied by the four players, was moving away from the door as he sprang in beside her and slammed the door.

Peter's efforts to stay behind Tommy's venerable but surprisingly energetic car were the cause of many a gasp and shudder from the couple who sat behind him in the bounding car. He had orders to keep back of Tommy but never to lose sight of his tail light.

"Are you there?" he whispered.

"Yes. Isn't it jolly, running away like this? It must be wonderfully exciting to be a criminal, always dodging and—"

"Sh! Even a limousine may have ears!"

But if the limousine had possessed a thousand ears they would have been rendered useless in the stormy racket made by Peter's muffler and the thunderous roar of the exhaust as the car got under way.

Sixty miles lay between them and Crowndale. Tommy Gray guaranteed that the distance could be covered in three hours, even over the vile mountain roads. Ten o'clock would find them at the Grand Palace hotel, none the worse for wear, provided (he always put it parenthetically) they lived to tell the tale! The luggage had gone on ahead of them earlier in the day.

Soon after ten o'clock they entered the town of Crowndale and drew up before the unattractive portals of the Grand Palace hotel. An arc lamp swinging above the entrance shed a pitiless light upon the dreary, Godforsaken hostelry with the ironic name.

Miss Cameron was warmly conscious of the thrill that had come into her blood when he carried her up the stairs in his powerful arms, disdaining the offer of assistance from the suddenly infatuated Tommy Gray.

"Rehearsal at eleven sharp," announced Rushcroft. "Letter-perfect, every one of you. No guessing. By the way, Miss—er—'pon my soul, I don't believe I got your name?"

"Jones," said the new member, shamelessly.

Barnes went down to the dingy lobby. A single, half-hearted electric bulb shed its feeble light on the desk, in front of which stood a man registering under the sleepy eye of the night clerk.

Barnes was turning away when a familiar voice assailed him.

Whirling, he looked into the face of a man who stood almost at his elbow—the sharp, impassive face of Mr. Sprouse.

CHAPTER XX.

The First Wayfarer Has One Treasure Thrust Upon Him—And Forthwith Claims Another.

"What are you doing here?" demanded Barnes, staring. He seized the man's arm and inquired eagerly: "Have you got the jewels?"

"No; but I will have them before morning," replied Sprouse coolly. "Would you be surprised if I were to tell you that his royal nibs is hiding in this town? Well, he certainly is. The Baroness Hedlund has been here for a week or ten days. She goes by the name of Mrs. Hasselwein. I popped down here this afternoon and found out that she is at the sanatorium, but that she expects to leave tomorrow morning. I made another trip out there this evening and waited. About eight o'clock Mr. Hasselwein strolled up. He sat on the veranda with her for half an hour or so and then left. I followed him. He went to one of the little cottages that belong to the sanatorium. I couldn't get close enough to hear what they said, but I believe he expects to take her away in an automobile early in the morning. It is a seventy-mile ride from here to the junction where they catch the train for the West. I'm going up now to make a call on Mr. Hasselwein. By the way, what is the number of your room?"

"Twenty-two—on the next floor."

"Good. Go upstairs now and I'll join you in about ten minutes. I will tap three times on your door."

"Why should you come to my room, Sprouse? We can say all that is to be said—"

"If you will look on the register you will discover that Mr. J. H. Prosser registered here about half an hour ago. He is in room 30. He left a call for five o'clock. Well, Prosser is another name for Ugo. He left the cottage an hour ago. Came in a jitney or I could have got to him on the way over."

Barnes, regardless of consequences, dashed over to inspect the register. Sprouse followed leisurely.

"See!" cried Barnes, excitedly, putting his finger on the name "Miss Jones." "She's in room 32—next to his. By gad, Sprouse, do you suppose he knows that she is here? Would the dog undertake anything—"

"You may be sure he dosen't know she's here, or you either, for that matter. The country's full of Joneses and Barneses. Go on upstairs. Leave everything to me."

Barnes had been in his room for twenty minutes before he heard the tapping on his door. He opened it and Sprouse slid into the room. The instant the door closed behind him, he threw open his coat and coolly produced a long, shallow metal box, such as one finds in safety vaults.

"With my compliments," he said dryly, thrusting the box into Barnes' hands. "You'd better have the countess check them up and see if they're all there. I am not well enough acquainted with the collection to be positive."

Barnes was speechless. He could only stare, open-mouthed, at this amazing man.

"My God, Sprouse, have you been in that man's room since I saw you down—"

"All you have to do is to keep quiet and look innocent. Stay out of the hall tonight Don't go near the door of men. Then, with infinite caution, Sprouse turned the knob and opened the door a half inch or so. He left the room so abruptly that Barnes never quite got over the weird impression that he squeezed through that slender crack, and pulled it after him!

"Isn't It Jolly, Running Away Like This?"

Many minutes passed before he turned on the light. The key of the box was tied to the wire grip. With trembling fingers he inserted it in the lock and opened the lid. . . . "A half-million dollars' worth of nice little things," Sprouse had said!

He did not close his eyes that night. Daybreak found him lying in bed, with the box under his pillow, a pistol at hand, and his eyes wide open. He was in a graver quandary than ever. Now that he had the treasure in his possession, what was he to do with it?

He solved the breakfast problem by calling downstairs for a waiter and ordering coffee and rolls and eggs sent up to his room. Singularly enough the waiter solved the other and more disturbing problem for him.

"Some robbery last night," said that worthy. "Feller up in one of the cottages at the sanatorium. All beat up, something fierce they say."

"Up in— Where?" almost shouted Barnes, starting up.

The man explained where the cottages were situated.

"Seems he was to leave by auto early this mornin', and they didn't know anything was wrong till Joe Keep—he's driving a car Mr. Norton has for rent—till Joe'd been settin' out in front for nearly half an hour. The man's wife was waitin' fer him up at the main buildin' and she got so tired waitin' that she sent one of the clerks down to see what was keeping her husband. Well, sir, him and Joe couldn't wake the feller, so they climb in an open winder, an' by gosh, Joe says it was terrible. The feller was layin' on the bed, feet an' hands tied and gagged, and blood from head to foot. He was inconscious, Joe says, an'—my God, how his wife took on! Joe says he couldn't stand it, so he snook out, shakin' like a leaf."

"Is—is the man dead?" cried Barnes, aghast.

"Nope! Seems like it's nothing serious: just beat up, that's all. Terrible cuts on his head and—"

"What time did all this happen?"

"Doc Smith figgers it was long about midnight, judgin' by the way the blood co'gulated."

"Did they get away with much?"

"Haven't heard. Seems as though the burglar—must ha' been more'n one of 'em, I say—wasn't satisfied with crackin' him over the head. He stuck the point of a knife or something into him—just a little way, Joe says—in more'n a dozen places. What say?"

"I—I didn't say anything."

"I thought you did. Well, if I hear anything more I'll let you know."

NOT MUCH TO WRITE ABOUT

Reporter Naturally Found It Hard to Make a Very Long Story Out of Happening.

The city editor of an Ohio paper said to a new reporter:

"There's to be a meeting of the trustees at the public library building this evening at eight o'clock. You cover it. Make a story of about 400 words."

The cub went away on his assignment, and the chief of the local department turned again to his desk, made entry in the assignment book that lay before him, and dismissed the matter from his mind. About eleven o'clock, however, he suddenly called out:

"Where's Tompkins?"

"Here, sir," said the new reporter, coming forward.

"I sent you to a board meeting at the public library. Where's your story?"

"It isn't quite finished yet. You told me to make 400 words of it, and I've got only a little over 300 so far."

"What did they do?"

"They met, called the roll and adjourned until next Friday evening."

Impossible Task.

"No man can serve two masters."

"I should like to try it once. It ought to be easy compared to my job. I'm trying to please 600 masters."

"Six hundred! How do you make that out?"

"I'm chairman of the house committee of our club."

Young Teacher's Reply Might Have Been Merely a Statement of Plain Fact, or—

The young primary teacher had been continually annoyed by Bobby's mother ever since he had entered school. Nothing suited her. At first it was the hours, then the arrangement of Bobby's seat, and finally, after a score of complaints about everything imaginable, she began to come to school to criticize the teacher's methods and books used. "Now, these readers are not nearly so interesting as the ones we used to use," she said. "Couldn't you get some of those old books and use them to supplement these?" she asked.

"I don't know whether I could find any," hesitated the little teacher.

"But you will find the stories so much more interesting that you will be paid for your effort in hunting them," insisted the woman. "How I did love those stories! There was one about a little red hen. It—"

"I don't believe that would interest my children now," interrupted the young teacher. "You see, the hen grew up."—Indianapolis News.

Cho-Cho is Coming, Children!

INCREASING WEIGHT

CHO-CHO GIVES HEALTH RULES

"CHO-CHO! Cho-Cho! Cho-Cho, the Health Clown!" yelled the 2,500 children packed into the big assembly hall of the school.

Sure enough, it was Cho-Cho, the famous health clown. The familiar figure walked out on the platform and every child there could see at a glance that he was a really-truly, sure-enough circus clown, with his white face with red spots on it, his big white ruff, full trousers and coat, marked with the bright red diamonds. In one hand he carried a metal scale (such as is used for weighing the baby) and on the other arm a market basket filled with green vegetables, from the midst of which peeped a frying-pan and a coffeepot and a pint bottle of milk.

"Hello, children!" he called out. "Glad to see you!" And he tripped over an imaginary obstacle, nearly losing his hold on his market basket, to the unholy joy of the youthful spectators.

"Ho, ho!" he roared. "Almost lost my dinner that time. Those vegetables are precious. I eat 'em alive and get big and strong."

The white figure advanced to the center of the platform by slow stages, because of a continuous dropping of the various articles contained in his basket. In picking up a carrot he dropped a beet and in picking up the beet he dropped a cabbage, and so on; and how these children laughed! At last he deposited his burdens safely on the bench.

"I've been to the country and the things in that big basket were all given to me as presents by a kind farmer and his wife. Shall I tell you about my visit?"

The delighted yell that went up was answer enough. So Cho-Cho told about it. The farmer and his wife showed him how the cows were milked and they told him that these animals were working overtime to get milk enough for the city children, who insisted on drinking milk instead of tea and coffee because it makes them grow tall and strong.

This reminded him that he had had no milk since breakfast and he must interrupt his story to take his nourishment, for milk is a food as well as a drink and he makes it a point to drink at least a quart a day. He took the bottle of milk from his basket, removed the paper top, wiped the neck of the bottle carefully with a paper napkin, explaining that he always did this to any bottle or glass or cup from which he drank, as one never knows who used the article or whether or not they had whooping cough or measles or mumps or any other disease that one might catch. Then, with much joyous blinking of the eyes and rubbing of the stomach and wiggling of the toes, he drank the entire contents of the bottle.

He found the eggs, which the hens had laid in the hay, and learned that there is as much nourishment in one egg as there is in a good big piece of beefsteak. The vegetable garden was visited and he learned that spinach, a vegetable for which he never cared, contains a vast amount of iron, which makes one strong so that one can win races and pitch baseballs better than any of the other fellows in our gang, and so on.

And—what do you think! When he got back after eating these things that make one strong and healthy he had gained a whole pound. And this he proved by standing on the scales and letting one of the children read the figures. A whole pound! and a normal child is only supposed to gain half a pound in a whole month. He pranced about and laughed with glee over this glad news.

And then he produced the frying pan and the coffeepot, which he brandished in the air as he pranced about, declaring that they were the deadly enemies of all children, and the only thing that should be put in them was holes. Nothing cooked in a frying pan or a coffeepot was fit for any child to take into his system, and he hurled them from him in a rage.

Then he gave a side-splitting imitation of a boy going to bed. He undressed with great care and carefully folded each garment, and placed it on a chair, yawning and rubbing his eyes the while.

"What does he do next?" he asked his audience.

"He brushes his teeth!" was the reply.

"He sure does," answers Cho-Cho, "and this is how he brushes them, up and down, up and down, in the new style, instead of cross-ways, in the old-fashioned way. And then he gargles his throat like this, to get rid of all the dust of the street—and next?"

"He takes a bath!"

"Right again," says the clown, and you never saw such fun as Cho-Cho had in his bath, scrubbing himself and squeezing the sponge over his head, and getting soap in his eyes and mouth, and sputtering and laughing all at once. One never realized that a bath could be such fun.

"And now," said he, as he rubbed his back with the imaginary towel, "what next?"

"He opens his windows!" came the chorus.

"Of course," said Cho-Cho, "he opens them at the top and the bottom, like this, so that Mr. Good Air can come in and Mr. Bad Air can go out. And now he drinks a glass of nice, cold water—he drinks four of these every day and this is his last—mm, mm, it's good! Now he jumps into bed and the first thing you know he's snoring away like this."

"I must go now. But remember! If you do these things you'll gain half a pound a month." So he backed away and out the door, kissing his hand and shouting "Good-by" at every step, though the children yelled so that he could hardly be heard at all.

This is a true story. It happened just this way in New York city and is going to happen in many other cities. Cho-Cho is a real clown and he is working in this thing for Uncle Sam to make the school children strong and healthy.

The school hygiene division of the National Bureau of Education of the Interior Department is carrying on a national health contest among the school children of the country. At present there are, according to Secretary Lane, 6,000,000 underweight children in the country, and 15,000,000 suffering from physical defects which could be prevented or corrected. The bureau of education's health contest aims to reach these children.

"Health, strength, joy" is the motto of the division, and its methods are all directed toward making health education real fun. Health charts which children fill in for themselves, showing their weight and height and how much each of them gains, are sent by the division to all schools and teachers which ask for them. Brightly colored pamphlets for teachers and children, and personal letters, give advice about health problems. And best and latest of all, Cho-Cho, real circus clown, has been employed to make amusing and helpful talks on what a child should eat, wear and do to be strong and well.

It is a fact that at least 15 per cent of our children today are suffering from malnutrition, resulting not so much from eating too little as from eating and drinking the wrong kind of food. All sorts of methods have been tried, with very little success, to remedy this condition, to induce the parents to provide and the children to eat the foods that will nourish and give them strength. Cho-Cho and a pair of scales, on which each child can be weighed once a month, is a combination that will go a very long way toward bringing about the desired results.

The monthly weighing is a most important factor in this work. Johnny and Jenny, who have rigidly lived up to the instructions given by Cho-Cho for four long weeks, step onto the scales with their eyes shining and their hearts pounding with excitement. If they have gained more than the desired half a pound, their cup of joy is brimming over, and if, on the other hand, they are not quite up to the mark, their guilty consciences remind them of the coffee which they have drunk or of the baths which they neglected to take, or the green vegetables which they refused to eat, and they realize that Cho-Cho was right—one cannot do these things and still gain his half a pound a month.

Cho-Cho is very busy these days. He is booked solid for months to come in various cities. But one clown cannot do all the work of the country, and so other Cho-Chos are being trained. It is a nation-wide campaign, which they are waging to better the condition of the boys and girls who are to constitute the next generation of our citizens.

"What the Dickens."

Shakespeare as well as Dickens anticipated some modern catch phrases, such as the popular injunction to keep your hair on. "You are like to lose your hair!" remarks one of the characters in "The Tempest." Then we find Falstaff exclaiming:

"The game is up."

"I cannot tell what the dickens his name is."

And a thirsty soul in "Antony and Cleopatra" confesses:

"I have yet room for six Scotches more."—London Chronicle.

EAGER FOR GREAT ADVENTURE

Men of Today Vastly Different From Those Who Went Exploring With Christopher Columbus.

They had to bribe men in the earnest and timorous days of Columbus to ship for the first Atlantic trip. Sailing towards the edge of a perfectly flat earth had no particular charms, even for criminals and "broken men" who were offered indemnity if they would go. Life imprisonment, in safety, seemed better than high adventure terminated at any moment by a sudden cataclysmic death.

That was 427 years ago. Now, says the New York Evening Post, there is no need to call for criminals to man the first Atlantic trips in air. They had to turn men away from the crew of the R-34 on the first voyage by lighter-than-air machine, and even then one stowaway got himself aboard and made the trip. The idea was to keep the tremendous dirigible as light as possible. And so, with all this eagerness for flying, the R-34's crew was smaller than the crew of the Santa Maria, which consisted of 52 ignorant and fearful men, who had no idea just why they went, or where. On the three ships together, the Encyclopedia Britannica says, there were 88 men, 52 on the sailing ship Santa Maria, which Columbus commanded himself, and 18 apiece on the caravals Pinta and Nina.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview of the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. It is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

Easy Money.

A discharged soldier with his young wife recently went on a shopping tour in Washington. Ex-soldier, very tired and not having much interest in walking the aisles of a department store, sat himself down in the lobby and promised his wife to remain there until her return. When his wife returned she was shockingly surprised to see a dollar and a half in her husband's hat.

Biliousness, rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica, general weakness, loss of power and energy, headache, insomnia, nervousness, mental depression—even more serious ailments such as catarrh and cancer of the stomach, intestinal ulcers, cirrhosis of the liver, heart trouble—all of these can often be traced directly to acid-stomach.

Birth of Red Cross Idea.

The suffering of soldiers in the Crimean war first directed the world's attention to the merit of systematic care for the wounded. In 1859 M. Henri Dunant was visiting Italy and witnessed the carnage of the battle of Solferino. He organized volunteers to help take care of the wounded. Out of his work grew the conference at Geneva, in 1863, and another in 1864. These conferences were the formal beginning of the Red Cross. The name and insignia were adopted. The American Red Cross was organized by Clara Barton in 1881.

Consider Probable End.

Better it is, toward the right conduct of life, to consider what will be the end of a thing, than what is the beginning of it; for what promises fair at first may prove ill, and what seems at first a disadvantage may prove very advantageous.—Wells.

To Prevent Beriberi.

Two thousand physicians assembled at the Imperial university in Kyoto recently to hear Dr. Shimasono lecture on beriberi, the cause of which is much disputed among medical authorities. The disease is not contagious, and its chief cause is eating pure rice, although the doctor disbelieves the theory that rice ever causes blood poisoning.

The speaker said that if rice is taken into the body along with other foods there is less danger of beriberi. He cited the cases of prisoners, factory hands, Buddhist monks and others, who ate much wheat mixed with rice. Buddhist monks eat ten or twenty times as much other food as rice, and rarely suffer from the disease. Among the factory hands of the Kejiho iron foundry of the Mitsubishi company 450 of the 2,000 Japanese suffered from beriberi because they ate pure rice, while only 9 of 3,000 Koreans suffered from the disease presumably because they ate millet and beans.

Doctor Shimasono advised the eating of wheat with rice, in the ratio of six parts of rice to four parts of wheat. This will create a market for the shipment to Japan or larger quantities of wheat from Oregon and Washington. —East and West.

Dearth of Queen Bees in England

Beekeeping in England was badly hit by the war, for the scarcity of sugar made it impossible to supply the hives with syrup for winter feeding. It is estimated that owing to this and other war causes, the bee population of England has been reduced by 75 per cent. Last year, in spite of the war, England paid nearly fourteen million dollars for imported honey, so now the food production department of the government has decided to import queen bees from Italy and in other ways help to restore the industry.

BOY WINS LIFE BY POKER GAME

Stephen Scanlan Relates Hair-Raising Experience While in Mexico.

USE CORN FOR MONEY

Falls Into Hands of Martin Lopez, Most Bloodthirsty of Villa's Followers—Happy to Be Back In United States.

El Paso, Texas.—Stephen Scanlan, 16 years old, is the youngest soldier of fortune.

Steve has just tasted all the hair-breadth escape and "bite-the-dust" adventure you hoped to experience when you were his age and were thrilling to the dare-devil feats of Diamond Dick, Handsome Harry and Wild Bill.

Steve lives to tell how he played poker with Martin Lopez, most bloodthirsty of Villa's followers:

How he narrowly escaped execution against a 'dobe wall—

How he scouted for the Mexican federal troops, and—

How he was held by bandits.

All this below the Rio Grande whither he had wandered in search of adventure when he ran away from his home town, the tame city of Providence, R. I.

Mexico Appeals to Adventurer.

Young Scanlan had read much about Mexico, and decided that was the country for him. Making his way to El Paso, he evaded the soldier and immigration authorities on both sides of the line, riding across the Rio Grande in a box car.

From Juarez he went south on a Carranzista troop train, and at Meoqui he got his first thrill.

Villistas threatened to attack the train. When the bandits retreated Scanlan volunteered to sneak after them and do a bit of scouting for the federals. By way of appreciation, the federals boarded the train, leaving him to the mercies of the military police of the little town. He was being taken to jail as a Villista suspect when an interpreter happened along and secured the boy's release.

Rejoining the troops, Scanlan eventually arrived at Parral.

With an American boy's proper pride, Steve refused to act as a servant to a captain, and the officer in a rage threw the youngster against a 'dobe wall and had drawn his gun to shoot him when soldier friends interceded.

Then came the battle of May 4, in which the Villistas drove the Carranza garrison from Parral.

Steve was captured by Martin Lopez, the Villista tiger man.

Was he afraid? He was not. When the battle was over, the boy calmly proposed a game of poker with the bandit chief. It struck Lopez as amusing. He admired the lad's cool courage.

"Sit down," he laughed uproariously, slapping his thigh and commanding his soldiers to gather round. "Here's a gringo boy who would play the great game with Lopez."

Used Corn for Money.

Kernels of corn were used instead of money. Lopez lost several pecks of corn—and his admiration for the American boy grew.

In this way Steve won his release from the bandits.

He concluded he had enough thrills to last him for a time, and started hiking the long trail back to the border. An American mining man gave him some money. He worked a little, here and there. A few days ago he reached El Paso—sunburned, in rags, penniless but happy.

Just a plain American kid who had the nerve to go out and get the adventure which you, gentlemen, got second hand from the thumb-marked pages of "Wild Bill."

Now he's on his way back to that tame, respectable Providence to tell the other kids about it.

The population of Madagascar at the close of 1917 was estimated at 3,227,470.

STEEL WORKERS OPEN BIG STRIKE

Many Workers Fail to Answer the Whistles; Unions' Walkout Is Planned.

GREAT MASSMEETINGS HELD

Superintendents of the Different Mills Plan to Keep Running and Guards Are on Duty—Say No Fires Will Be Drawn.

Chicago, Sept. 23.—The great steel strike fell on Chicago and Calumet districts when hundreds of workers refused to answer the steam blasts calling them to early night shifts.

Officially the strike went into effect at midnight Sunday, but after the haranguing and cheering of large crowds gathered at meetings in the various "steel cities" south, east, and north of Chicago, hundreds of union men refused to enter the plants.

The situation at Gary, the vortex of the local strike whirlpool, was typical. More than 6,000 men answered the union call at the East Side park to hear the officials of the United States Steel corporation condemned for their refusal to treat with the workers. Union heads claimed that 5,000 men were already on strike and would not report for work.

Local superintendents, however, declared that the plants would continue to operate as long as the men came to work. There will be no fires drawn as long as there are faithful employees to watch them. They derided union claims that the plants would be shut down as mere exaggeration. They estimated the union strength as between 15 and 25 per cent of the workers' total and promised protection for the men who reported for work.

In secret the management of the Illinois Steel company, a subsidary of the United States Steel corporation, made ready to protect its plants.

City authorities and Sheriff Barnes, in whose territory clashes are expected, if any materialize, will throw hundreds of deputies into Gary. Fifty police will patrol the main street, Broadway, and prevent crowds from accumulating. The strikers drew considerable satisfaction from the fact that no one reported to join the "Citizens' league," which was planned as a bulwark against disorders in Gary.

Another 6,000 met in Indiana Harbor, overflowing into the streets because the auditorium was too small to accommodate them. It was claimed that 80 per cent of the 12,000 workers were unionized.

Joliet saw a repetition of this. Only 2,500 men could find room inside the Slavish school hall and 3,000 more stood about in the streets, unable to hear the messages brought by organizers from Chicago.

E. H. Gary, head of the Steel corporation, was the center of abuse. R. N. Glover of Chicago declared that Gary placed himself above Christ, who, he said, was a laborer, a carpenter and an organizer.

This statement brought cries of "Kaiser Gary" from the assembly of union sympathizers.

In Hammond, where 1,500 employees of the Standard Steel Car company have been on strike for weeks, every man but one in the 1,800 union electrical workers, voted to go out in sympathy with the steel workers. There are about 10,000 employees in the trade in Hammond.

Nearly 2,000 met at Waukegan, the home of the Mark plant of the American Steel and Wire company, which has seen considerable labor trouble during the past year. Union leaders claimed that 200 recruits were obtained during the meeting. The city council turned down a request from the unions that their pickets be deputized as special police. It was planned to put 50 pickets on the job garbed in their overseas uniforms.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 23.—In the entire district it is estimated that 135,000 steel workers are idle.

Some of these are strikers. Others are workmen willing to stay at their jobs, but unable to do so because of the action of strikers in crippling departments of plants.

Disorder marked several meetings of strikers. Sixteen men were arrested at a meeting in Clairton, seat of a big plant of the Carnegie Steel company, and placed in the county jail.

BULGARIA GIVEN PEACE TREATY

Pact Presented to Mission at the French Foreign Office in Paris.

HAVE 25 DAYS TO CONSIDER

Thrace Excised, to Be Left Under Rule of Allies Until Decision Is Made—Defeated Country to Have Seaport.

Paris, Sept. 22.—The treaty of peace between the allied and associated powers and Bulgaria was presented to the Bulgarian mission at the French foreign office.

After the delegates had assembled Georges Clemenceau, president of the peace conference, spoke briefly in opening the session. He was followed by General Theodoroff, head of the Bulgarian mission.

M. Theodoroff spoke for 15 minutes, pleading that the Bulgarian people were not responsible for the war, but that the Bulgarian government had thrown the country into the struggle. He realized, however, he said, that the people must share the responsibility.

"They are willing to do so," he said, "but they feel that in no way have they committed such a crime as will compel them to accept servitude."

King Ferdinand and Vasell Radoslavoff, Bulgarian foreign minister in 1914, were blamed for Bulgaria's entry into the war by M. Theodoroff. He said the Bulgarian people did not approve of the German alliance, which he declared, "came to them as a cataclysm," but they realized they must accept part of the responsibility.

"We have committed faults," he said, "and we shall bear their consequences within the bounds of equity, but there is a punishment no crime can justify, and that is servitude."

Although the United States was not at war at any time with Bulgaria, it will be a signatory to the treaty for the purpose of adding its influence in securing observance by Bulgaria of the covenant of the League of Nations, which is an integral part of the pact.

Disposition of Thrace was a subject on which the peace conference was forced to pass the most time in the preparation of the treaty. As it develops, this question has not been finally adjusted, but Thrace is to be excised from Bulgarian territory and left under the supervision of the principal allied and associated powers, which later will announce their decision as to the future status of the country. A plan by which the port of Dedeagatch, on the Aegean sea, would be given to Bulgaria with a corridor leading to it similar to that provided for in the German treaty, by which Poland was given access to Danzig, on the Baltic, has been considered, but it has never been formally adopted. Bulgaria, under the treaty terms, however, is assured an economic outlet to the Aegean.

AIR RECORD IS SET

ROHLFS SCORES ALTITUDE MARK OF 34,610 FEET.

Believed to Be New Figure—Achieved in 78 Minutes—Machine Balks for Time.

Mineola, N. Y., Sept. 20.—A new world's altitude record is believed to have been made here when Roland Rohlfs, test pilot for the Curtiss Airplane company, soared 34,610 feet above sea level, according to the official barograph, in 78 minutes. As Roosevelt field, his starting point, is 110 feet above sea level, Rohlfs actually climbed 34,500 feet, according to the barograph. His altimeter registered 34,400 feet.

Rohlfs on landing was greeted by his wife who ran to his side and said:

"What did you do?"

"I think I have done it this time, all right," he replied, and then after a few minutes he said: "I believe all official and unofficial records have been shattered. I am satisfied this machine can't be made to go any higher with its present equipment. I am through with high flying for the present and I am glad to be able to be down here to say it.

"At a height of about 31,000 feet my machine dropped about six hundred feet. The machine turned over on its ear and kept going from side to side with an oscillating movement. It was terrible. After working with the mechanism for some time, I finally put on high speed and found the machine righted itself and began to climb again.

"I began to use the oxygen tanks about 20,000 feet up.

"I reached the greatest altitude after climbing 78 minutes, and maintained that altitude for about 20 minutes." Nothing unusual happened to him, he said, except that his teeth ached.

"Another peculiar thing that I noticed this time was a sort of nervous twitching on my body," he added, "where I have scars as a result of burns I received several years ago. These began to pull and twitch and it lasted for quite a while."

MARINES LAND NEAR FIUME

U. S. Force Put Ashore at Buccari, Ten Miles From Invested City.

Rome, Sept. 22.—American marines have been landed at Buccari, a small town on an arm of the Gulf of Quarnero, about ten miles southeast of Fiume, says a dispatch to the Messaggero. One American ship is in Fiume harbor, according to advices, but the anchorage is a considerable distance from the city.

General Badoglios' ultimatum to the d'Annunzio soldiers, giving them 24 hours to leave Fiume, is said to have been modified so that the time limit would expire last night, an additional 48 hours being given.

Fiume is closely invested, but in spite of this fact numbers of volunteers have managed to elude the vigilance of the guards and have joined the forces of Captain d'Annunzio in the beleaguered city, according to reports received here.

THANKS GEN. PERSHING

COMMANDER RECEIVES GRATITUDE OF CONGRESS.

First Division Cheered By Half Million People as It Parades Up Pennsylvania Avenue.

Washington, Sept. 20.—Standing in the chamber of the house of representatives, with both the senate and house present and the galleries crowded with admirers, General Pershing, received the formal thanks of congress for the services he and the officers and men he commanded in France rendered during the great war. There was an air of solemnity about the scene more eloquent than words to tell its full meaning.

Senator Cummins, as president pro tempore of the senate, sat with Speaker Gillett, and when General Pershing had been escorted to the floor before the speaker's desk, facing a great American flag draped on the wall, extended the first greeting.

Speaker Gillett followed with a tribute to the general and his army.

The formal resolution of thanks was then presented to the general by former Speaker Clark.

Washington, Sept. 19.—Tears and cheers greeted the returned First division, led by General Pershing, when it marched down Pennsylvania avenue over the American Way of Victory laid out more than 50 years ago.

TROOPS OUT AT CAMDEN, N. J.

Fearing mob violence, the motormen and conductors refused to take their cars from the barns and the service on all except one line was suspended.

SEVEN SHOT IN STRIKE RIOTING

Guards Raid Mill Pickets at New Castle (Pa.) Carnegie Mills.

STRIKE FAILS IN BIG PLANTS

Union Leaders Claim 284,000 Men Are Out All Over Country, but Many of the Large Plants Continue Operations.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 24.—William Z. Foster, secretary of the national committee for organizing iron and steel workers, gave out the following figures as indicating the number of men on strike:

Chicago district	60,000
Cleveland	30,000
Youngstown proper	15,000
Youngstown district, including Sharon, Farrell, New Castle, Strowthers, Butler Canton and Massillon	50,000
Buffalo	12,000
Homestead	9,000
Braddock	5,000
Rankin	3,000
Clairton	4,000
Monessen and Donora	12,000
Wheeling	15,000
Steubenville	6,000
Pueblo	6,000
McKeesport and Duquesne	12,000
Pittsburgh city	15,000
Vandergrift	4,000
Leechburg	2,000
Brackenridge	5,000
Johnstown	15,000
Contesville	4,000
Total	284,000

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 24.—The great steel strike, less than twenty-four hours old, saw its first tragedy when guards at mills at the Carnegie Steel company in New Castle engaged in a shooting duel with strikers and their sympathizers.

Seven persons were struck by bullets, two of them women. Six of the injured were seriously hurt. All were removed to the New Castle hospital.

The shooting, preceded by the throwing of bricks and other heavy missiles during the afternoon, lasted half an hour. According to eye-witnesses, more than 100 shots were fired.

The strikers had taken a stand on Moravia street, opposite the plant buildings. Deputy sheriffs and mill guards were stationed just in front of the property of the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie railroad.

The first shot came while the strikers were "booing" the mill guards.

Suddenly an automatic pistol sounded. Riot guns leaped to the shoulders of deputies and mill guards and fired into the crowd. The strikers returned the fire from automatic pistols and revolvers which jumped from scores of pockets and waist lines.

One of the women was struck in the neck and leg and seriously hurt.

Indications are that the strike so far has failed to cause any serious trouble to most of the big plants in Pittsburgh proper and its immediate environs.

In Homestead, Braddock, Duquesne, and, on the south side of the city, where the largest corporation and independent mills are located, a very small proportion of men have joined the ranks of the strikers.

At the big Homestead plant of the Carnegie Steel company, it is said about 20 per cent of the workers refused to report for work.

The management of the Edgar Thomson works in Braddock stated that less than 300 men were out there, and at the Duquesne plant it was stated that they were operating in full.

Less than 100 men are reported to have struck at the big plants of the Jones & Laughlin company, which line both sides of the Monongahela river for miles.

Chicago, Sept. 24.—The leaders of the strike claim that from 75,000 to 80,000 men had quit work in the Chicago district; that all plants in Gary, Indiana Harbor, East Chicago, Joliet, South Chicago, Evanston, Milwaukee, Waukegan, Dekalb and Sterling were shut down. In Gary, they said, 97 per cent of the men were out. The employers reduced the figures of the strike bosses, but admitted inability to operate.

There was no violence. The men walked off when the night shift was done, carrying their empty dinner pails, and the day shift did not enter the plants.

In some plants a minority of employees came to work as usual. But the strikers say these were mainly men over fifty-five years old, who are nearing the time when they can retire on a pension.

Asks for Allied Force.

London, Sept. 24.—The Italian government has appealed to the allied powers to send an allied force, exclusive of Italians, to drive D'Annunzio out of Fiume, according to a report here, which is considered reliable.

To Close Coal Mines.

Pueblo, Colo., Sept. 24.—All mines in the southern coal field, supplying coal to the Colorado Fuel and Iron company's plants here, have been ordered closed. This does not affect the commercial mines of the company.

Oskaloosa, Iowa.—"For years I was simply in misery from a weakness and awful pains—and nothing seemed to do me any good. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so and got relief right away. I can certainly recommend this valuable medicine to other women who suffer, for it has done such good work for me and I know it will help others if they will give it a fair trial."—Mrs. LIZZIE COURTNEY, 108 8th Ave., West, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

Why will women drag along from day to day, year in and year out, suffering such misery as did Mrs. Courtney, when such letters as this are continually being published. Every woman who suffers from displacements, irregularities, inflammation, ulceration, backache, nervousness, or who is passing through the Change of Life should give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial. For special advice write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of its long experience is at your service.

Mr. Reuter Was Almost Helpless From Kidney Trouble, But Doan's Made Him Well.

"I was in terrible shape from kidney trouble," says D. Reuter, North St., West Chicago, Ill. "I couldn't stoop because of the awful pains in my back and the steady, dull misery almost drove me frantic. I had to be helped out of bed mornings, the pains across my kidneys were so bad and nobody knows the agony I went through. I couldn't do anything and was almost helpless; it seemed I would never get well. At times everything in front of me grew dark and I couldn't see for several minutes. I perspired profusely and I was thirsty all the time. The urine passed far too often and burned like scalding water. The passages were scanty and I had no control over them.

Mr. Reuter

"For two years I suffered, trying medicine after medicine without relief. I was just about discouraged and didn't think I would ever be able to work again. Hearing about Doan's Kidney Pills I used them and four boxes cured me. My kidneys became normal, my back got well and strong and all the other troubles disappeared."

PUREST BLOODED JEWS ARE EXILES

Highlanders of the Caucasus Who Have Kept Free From Gentile Admixture.

SCORN THE PLAINS PEOPLE

Their Language and Many of Their Customs Are Peculiar—Date and Circumstances of Settlement in That Region Unknown.

London.—Of all the scattered tribes and remnants of the Jewish people, none is less known to the world at large, and certainly none presents a more striking contrast to the common conception of the modern children of Israel than the Jewish Highlanders of the eastern Caucasus. Yet there are probably none in all the world who have kept the Jewish blood more pure and free from gentile admixture, nor any who have more faithfully preserved the traditions, beliefs and customs of the times before the exile.

Indeed, they hold themselves quite aloof from the other Jews of the Caucasus region, refusing to intermarry with them, to worship with them, or even to have social or commercial intercourse with them beyond the limits of the barest necessity. No Scottish Highlander ever scorned the Lowlander one-half so much as these Highlander Jews scorn their kinsmen of the plains and of the urban ghetto.

Traditions Fail to Explain.

The date and the circumstances of their settlement in the Caucasus highlands are unknown, even in their own traditions, but it is certain that they have been there for nearly a thousand years. In that time their physical characteristics have been materially modified by their environment and mode of life. With characteristic Jewish faces and complexion, they have tall, stalwart, muscular bodies, resembling the best of the Hill men of India, or some of the giant Highlanders of Scotland. Their life is of course purely rural, since they have no considerable towns, and they devote themselves to agriculture, and the growing of grapes and tobacco. From the grapes they make both wine and brandy, and of these beverages they are heavy drinkers. Indeed they have the unenviable reputation of being the hardest drinkers in all that part of the world—which might easily be, since the Mohammedan tribes around them are almost entirely total abstainers. However, drunkenness is little known among them, if at all.

They are also great fighters. That is generally a characteristic of mountaineers, and in these highland Jews it is highly developed. They always go armed, as do the Montenegrins, and are never backward in using their weapons for defense. They do not, however, share in any of the blood feuds of the Circassian tribesmen, nor do they join in their raids and quarrels.

Their language is neither Hebrew nor that of the country in which they live, but rather what philologists term Parsi-Tartar, or a mingling of old Persian and Tartar. From this circumstance it is inferred that their ancestors went to the Chucasus from Persia in the days of Cyrus the Great, or Darius. Perhaps they were fugitives from Persian captivity; or else they preferred going to the Caucasus rather than back to Palestine. There is indeed one ancient legend which tells that they wandered northward in quest of Mount Ararat and the remains of Noah's ark.

The patriarchal mode of life prevails among them. When a son marries he does not establish a home of his own. He simply builds a wing on his father's house and lives in it. In this fashion there are often three or four generations living in a single house, which consists of a single story spread over a large area of ground. Each house has its own allotment of land, comprising grain field, tobacco field, vegetable garden and vineyard, and all are kept in a high state of cultivation, though with primitive methods. Each garden is inclosed within a wall of rubble and clay about six feet high.

These highland Jews have no rabbis and no religious head. They have no synagogues and no liturgy. They have a scroll of the law, but it is used only for reference. They observe the Sabbath in the strictest Mosaic fashion, doing no work and cooking no food, all food requiring it being cooked on the preceding day. They keep the Passover, not by eating unleavened bread, because all their bread is always unleavened, but by eating an evening meal in common in the open air. The Feast of Tabernacles is similarly observed, and they have a special ceremony of their own at each new moon.

Girls must always be betrothed for six months before marriage, and the bridegroom, instead of receiving a dowry with his bride, must pay her father a price for her. This is usually paid for in sheep, cattle or horses, but always in eighteens or some multiple thereof. The price may be 18 sheep or 36 head of cattle, or if the bridegroom is rich it may be 72 horses, but for some reason, the origin of which is lost in antiquity, the number must always be eighteen or a multiple of eighteen. There is no religious marriage ceremony, but a civil contract is written and signed.

When a child is born it is laid upon a platter, sprinkled with salt and exhibited to guests. Women go unveiled and speak to men as freely as in western lands. A man is permitted to have as many as three wives at once, though by no means all of them avail themselves of the privilege. Divorce is seldom if ever practiced. At death the body is not encoffined but is merely wrapped in a shroud and buried, while the women wail a dirge.

One of the most curious of all their customs is that of having the women of the household occupy rooms which are accessible from the rest of the house only through semicircular holes at the bottom of the wall, not more than two feet high, for all the world like the entrances to dog kennels. When a guest calls at a house he is welcomed in a spacious reception room, and then the host gets down on hands and knees and crawls through a hole in the wall in search of his wife, or wives, as the case may be, and presently comes crawling back, followed by the ladies of the household in the same undignified attitude. The women dress in jackets and loose trousers after the oriental fashion.

FIND BONES OF DWARF RACE

Squaw Creek Mesa Near Grand Canyon Burial Place of Ancient Tribe.

Prescott, Ariz.—That the Squaw creek mesa, 15 miles east of Grand canyon, was the burial ground of an ancient tribe of dwarfs, is the opinion of H. L. Loomis, prospector, who says he recently uncovered portions of 10 skeletons there.

In the old graves the prospector found a cupful of tuquoise and small pieces of ancient pottery, some of which have been sent to the University of Arizona and the remainder to the Smithsonian Institution.

All the bones found were those of a diminutive race, Loomis said.

Lazy Husband Roundup Due at Yakima, Wash.

Yakima, Wash.—A round-up of "lazy husbands" is threatened here by local officials.

Washington state has a law which puts lazy husbands at work and gives the family of such men their earnings. Officials say the county is so plagued with men liable for prosecution under the law that a round-up will soon start. One case cited here was of a husband who rode around the reservation in an automobile while his wife drove a hay rick for a laborer's wage.

Attempt to Be Cave Man Leads to Arrest

Portland, Ore.—John Law is always spoiling romance.

Just when Ernest Fix tried to pull a cave-man stunt and fix it up for him and Miss Polly Engle to wed the bride-to-be went and had him arrested.

"He used to sit on my porch with a gun and threaten to kill me unless I married him," she told the court. Then Ernest, who is seventeen years old, was held under $2,000 for investigation by the grand jury.

SUE FOR INDIAN OIL LANDS

Property Worth 300 Million Dollars Is Sought by United States District Attorney.

Oklahoma City.—Suit will be filed in the United States district court on behalf of the Indian owners by John A. Fain, United States district attorney, for fifteen sections of Indian oil lands extending south to the old bank of the Red river, said to be valued at 300 million dollars, and involving some of the richest oil lands in the country. The move was decided at a conference in Washington at which Attorney General Palmer, Mr. Fain and a Texas representative were present.

The suit involves the determination of the old river bed which was the Texas-Oklahoma border. There are thirty-two Indian properties on the land, extending for sixteen miles, Fain says. It is opposite the best field in the Burkburnett field.

HICKORY NUTS ON GRAPEVINE

Missouri Farmer Produces a Wonder of Vegetable Life That Would Astonish Luther Burbank.

Kennett, Mo.—According to W. T. Romine, recorder of deeds of Dunklin county, Luther Burbank has been outdone on the farm of F. M. McNell, where a wild grapevine, growing around a hickory tree, has produced hickory nuts in the place of grapes for two consecutive seasons.

The vine was also seen by J. P. Nations and A. W. Winters, who accompanied Recorder Romine on a search for peaches. It is not claimed that the hickory nuts grow in clusters the same as grapes, but many people in the neighborhood will testify to the authenticity of the story, as it seems to be one of the peculiarities of nature caused by the "crossing" of the vine and tree.

SARAJEVO MONUMENT RAZED

Slavs Tear Down Shaft Marking Spot Where Archduke Ferdinand and Wife Were Killed.

Sarajevo, Bosnia.—The Slavs have torn down the beautiful monument of granite and bronze which the Austrians erected to the memories of Archduke Franz Ferdinand and his wife, Sophia, duchess of Hohenberg, which stood at a corner of the bridge here where their assassination by Prinzip furnished the spark that set off the world war. It bore a bronze plaque showing the figures of both Ferdinand and Sophia.

Sarajevo seems almost to have forgotten the assassination and is well on its way toward making "business as usual." As a demobilized soldier said, "We're all sick of the war business!"

Indian Gives Girl Saddle.

Tyndall, S. D.—What without doubt is one of the finest and most valuable saddles in the whole Northwest has been presented to Miss Anna Kirk of this city by an old Indian friend. The saddle is entirely covered with beads, red, white and blue, fashioned in different designs. The saddle shows wear, and evidently had been in use in the tribe for some years. The work on it indicates that many months and perhaps years, were required to make the saddle and fashion the beadwork designs upon it. Miss Kirk refused an offer of $150 for the saddle, which thought to be one of the finest examples of Indian work in existence.

BIG CROWDS GREET PRESIDENT AT RENO; WEATHER SIZZLING

Thousands of Visitors Flock to Hear Plea for Peace Ratification.

GREAT GATHERINGS ALL ALONG ROUTE

Speaks In Packed Auditorium at Reno After Run From Sacramento Through a Blistering Sun—After Brief Stop Trip to Salt Lake Is Resumed.

Reno, Nev., Sept. 23.—A blistering sun sizled President Wilson over the California boundary line into this city late last night. It made the all-steel cars of the "White House Special" resemble bake ovens, but with all its heat it did not exceed in temperature the warmth of the welcome given the president at every little town, cross roads and village through which the train passed.

The president had only one set speech for the day. It was given to a large and enthusiastic audience here. Shortly after noon, however, when the train pulled into Sacramento, the president appeared on the observation platform of the Mayflower and addressed a crowd of 5,000 persons. His speech did not exceed 500 words. He touched briefly on the Shantung matter, and closed with these words: "The heart of America is right and her purpose is irresistible."

People Out En Masse.

It took the president's train nearly one-half hour to go through Sacramento and the California capital was out en masse to see him. Thousands of school children and grown folk, too, lined the tracks and cheered him as the train went slowly. The same outpouring of people occurred, moreover, at Stockton, Lodi and other towns and cities in the San Joaquin and Sacramento valleys. Both these portions of California presented large numbers of Japanese men and women, and hordes of Japanese children to the view of the president, and many of the most fertile farms of both valleys were being worked by Oriental laborers, who stared in silence at the special as it sped along.

The president made a great hit with the children of Sacramento. In common with the children of every other city that he has visited the Sacramento youngsters started on a mad dash after the "Mayflower" once they spied the president, but here their elders started running also. Some small boys in the foreground of the pursuers grasped hands to restrain the crowds from pushing forward too rapidly. Then the president stepped to the railing of the car.

President Drills Children.

"I'm going to drill you," he called out to the boys. "Shoot," was the reply he received.

Thereupon the president, in unmistakable schoolmaster fashion, raised his hand and began this chant: "Four four, four feet back. Four, four, four feet back."

The children caught the words instantly, took up the tune, and thereafter the crowd was always "four feet back" from the "Mayflower," and there was no danger of anyone being injured.

It was a comparatively restful day for the president, but he was keenly concerned with all developments in the steel strike. The president believes that in sending the telegram to Samuel Gompers last week, wherein he expressed the hope of a postponement of the strike until the industrial conference had met in Washington and finished its work, he did all that was possible for him to do at the time. He is keeping in close touch with the situation, however, through Secretary of Labor Wilson.

The president, it was learned, will probably be in New York on October 3 to meet the king and queen of Belgium, who are expected to arrive in this country October 4. He will return to Washington immediately, however, to open the sessions of the Industrial conference October 6.

The presidential train left Reno immediately after the address. On Tuesday there will be a brief stop at Ogden, Utah, but no address is on the official schedule. He will speak Tuesday night in the tabernacle at Salt Lake City and Wednesday afternoon at Cheyenne, Wyo.

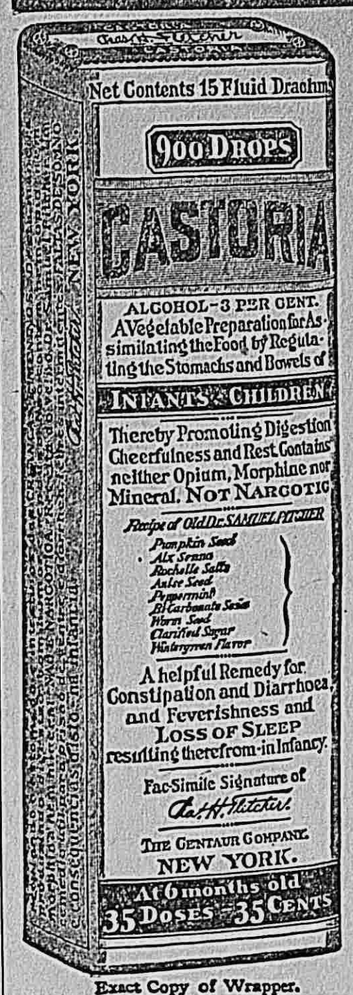

During the remainder of the week there will be two stops a day, the president speaking at Denver Thursday morning, at Pueblo, Colo., Thursday afternoon; at Wichita, Kan., Friday morning; Oklahoma City, Friday night; Little Rock, Ark., Saturday afternoon, and Memphis, Tenn., Saturday night.

Jasper's Clay Man.

Little Jasper Senter learned from the minister's sermon one Sunday that man was made of clay; so, after returning from church, he resolved to make him a man after his own fashion. The work proceeded in the clay bank back of the garden until his mother called Jasper to luncheon. He had completed all of the man save one leg.

That afternoon Jasper and his mother, while walking along the street, met a man with one leg, walking with crutches. Jasper accosted him and grabbed his coat.

"See here!" he said. "I thought I told you to stay there in the yard till I put that other leg on you."—Judge.

His Experience.

"Goodness gracious, Ysobelle! What sort of a butler is this new one you have? He admitted me with the most condescending unction, strutted half-way across the reception room with all the dignified pomposity of a strolling behemoth, and then suddenly sogged down in a chair, produced and lighted his pipe, flung his feet up on another chair and began scratching himself."

"Oh, you'll have to bear with Bliggins. All the experience he has had as a butler was in the movies, where he buttled for the width of the scene, and then was at ease until he got his cue again. But doesn't he do it beautifully while he lasts?"—Kansas City Star.

Fortunate is the girl who loses her temper and never finds it again.

"Oh, that's all moonshine."

Joyful Occasion.

"My darling," said a fond mother, who believed in appealing to children's tender feelings instead of punishing them, "if you are so naughty you will grieve mamma so that she will get ill and have to lie in bed in a dark room, and take nasty medicine, and then she may die and have to be taken away out to the cemetery and be buried, and you—"

The child had become more solemn, but an angelic smile overspread his face at his mother's last words and, throwing his arms about her neck, he exclaimed:

"Oh, mamma, and may I sit beside the coachman?"—London Tit-Bits.

Solving the Problem.

A new boy moved into the neighborhood, and Gordon's mother heard bad reports about him. "Now, Gordon," she warned, "I don't want you to go over into the next yard and play with that little boy. I hear he's very naughty." A short time later she heard Gordon calling over the wall: "Hey, there, kid! My mother says I ain't to go in your yard 'cause you're naughty, but you kin come over into our yard. I ain't naughty."

Exonerated.

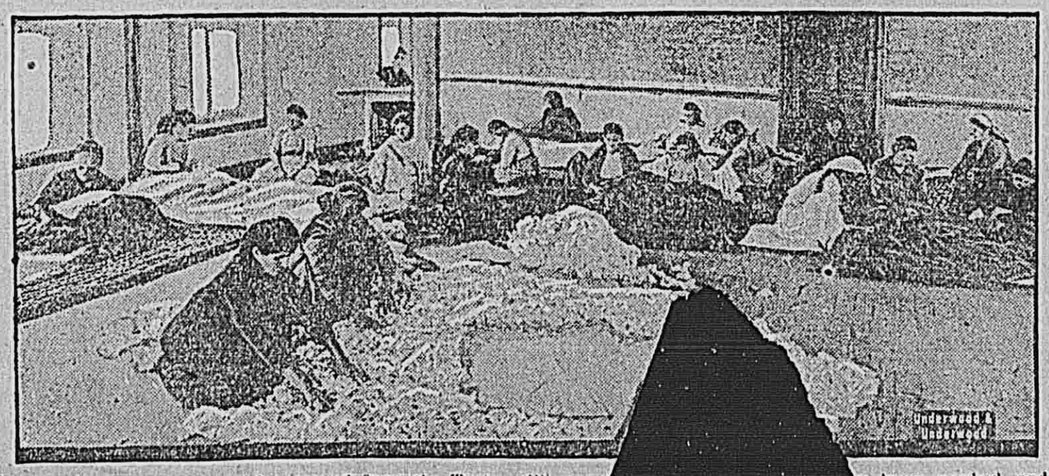

"Whatever did you see in me to induce you to marry me?" she asked.

"Nothing," he replied.

"What?" she cried indignantly.

"Oh, it wasn't your fault, my dear, I evidently had visions and I ought to have consulted an oculist at the time."—Boston Transcript.

The Flowing Tide.

No one, however great his genius or high his position, is all-important to the world; its work will go on without him. There may be ripples and disturbances in the current for a time where he sinks out of sight, but the tide will soon be flowing on as before. This truth may be painful to personal vanity, but it is comforting to every generous soul that cares more for others than for self.

Birds Foretell Weather Change.

Swallows are unerring in their instinct. If they are flying high, then an umbrella is not an immediate necessity. But if, when they are in search of their food, they skim along at a low altitude, it is safe to predict a downfall at no great period. The long-distance flyers, such as gulls and rooks, are well worth attention. They are not only weather-wise, but wise in common sense. They never venture far from home when bad weather is brewing.

Ill and Nervous.

Nurses dislike the season of thunderstorms. "We are not afraid of lightning ourselves," a nurse in a woman's hospital told me, "but it has a harmful effect on the patients. Most sick people fear lightning. In cases of extreme weakness or nervousness a dozen flashes of blinding lightning reduce the patient to a state of utter prostration."

High Price Paid for Beefsteak.

The highest price ever paid for beefsteak was probably at Circle City, Alaska, a town that sprang up over night during the Klondike gold excitement. The first beefsteak to reach there sold for $48 a pound. Every one wanted some of it, and so they raffled it off for the benefit of a hospital. Tickets were sold from 50 cents to $2.50 for the privilege of drawing a slice.
